Galician Situation.

Since the Austro-Germans in their drive through Galicia in May and June threw the Russians back upon the line of the Dniester and the Zlopa Lipa and Gnila Lipa rivers late in June there has been comparative inactivity along this front, so far as the official reports have indicated.

Today's statement from German army headquarters that the Russian lines on the Zlopa Lipa had been broken through apparently means that the Teutonic forces are renewing their thrusts in Galician territory and have scored a success in the course of an attempt to clear the remainder of that territory of Russian troops, which, if carried to a conclusion, would result in the Russians being forced back into their provinces of Volhynia and Padolia.

As it was, everything moved without a hitch, the only difficulty being the initiation of the little machine gun mules into their first ride on a boat. It took some little coaxing to get the little animals aboard the steamer for the trip to Washington. They were taken to the Capital city for the special duty of participating in the parade on the White House Ellipse, where the soldiers are to be reviewed by President Wilson.

Revenue from tonnage taxes, contrary to expectations, has remained undiminished in spite of the European war, owing principally to the great reduction of the immigrant traffic and ocean pleasure travel. Tonnage taxes are levied on five voyages of a ship a year. Many of the large transatlantic liners, which ordinarily make ten or twelve voyages a year, have been withdrawn from regular service and employed as transports to carry the troops of the allies from all parts of the world to the several seats of war. Their places in American trade have been partly supplied by cargo steamers, making relatively few voyages each, and paying tonnage taxes, accordingly, on each entry.
